A NOTE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

This November is shaping up to be historic in many ways. Hopefully you have already had the chance to cast your vote, or have a plan in place to vote in person Tuesday, November 3rd. This year I voted by mail and used the opportunity to show my children what the ballot looked like, how we make sure it is completed correctly and talk about some of the issues that were on the ballot.

As a non-political organization, CAAS does not make candidate recommendations or spend significant time lobbying for legislation, but we do encourage active involvement in our communities. There are a great number of nature based organizations that spend significant time and resources on the behalf of birds and the environment, including Michigan Audubon, the Audubon Society, Sierra Club, the Nature Conservancy, and many more. If you would like to know where candidates stand on the issues impacting the environment and birds in particular, I encourage you to seek out answers from a trusted source. To learn more about how to vote, and find out what is on your ballot, visit vote411.org.

CAAS is made up of very passionate members who care deeply about our families, communities, our environment, birds and equality. This November, we all need to make our voices heard and vote.

This fall, Michigan is also experiencing a rise in COVID-19 cases in the Greater Lansing area and across the state. It is likely that the remainder of our meetings for the 2020-2021 program year will need to take place virtually. We will skip our meeting in January this year to give our program organizers additional time to arrange presentations for the spring. We look forward to sharing again in person as soon as it is safe to do so.

We appreciate those members who have already taken the time to renew, and thank you for your ongoing support of CAAS.

I hope as fall migration wraps up, you find time to get outdoors, enjoy the amazing fall colors this year and take time to surround yourself with nature. It seems like it will be winter before we know it and we have already spotted many Dark-eyed Juncos in our backyard.

Keep an eye out for a few irruptive species that have been reported in the area as well! Red-breasted Nuthatch and Evening Grosbeak are in the area already this season! Consider joining Project Feeder Watch (Page 2) or submitting an eBird Checklist once a week for your own backyard birds.

Vote and stay healthy out there!

CHRISTMAS COUNT CHANGES

Due to the COVID-19 outbreak, this year's Christmas bird count will require a few changes if our count is to take place at all.

To ensure the safety of participants and compliance with local and state guidelines, Audubon has recommended that we wait until November 15th at the earliest to confirm if the CBC in our area will take place.

The CAAS Board supports cancelling the CBC for this year due to the group nature of our count and rising COVID-19 cases in our area.

Area leaders are encouraged to reach out to Barb Hosler at birdingbarb@yahoo.com and let her know if you are interested in participating in a socially-distanced CBC with a Zoom compilation meeting this year.

If the CBC is possible, Area Leaders will run a safe and socially-distanced count with no carpooling, wearing masks, and electronic CBC compilation forms. The count would end with a virtual Zoom meeting to share results at the end of the day.

The final plans for the CBC will be published in the Call Note in December.

KEY BIODIVERSITY AREAS WEBSITE

BirdLife International and 13 of the world's leading conservation institutions came together in 2016 to form the Key Biodiversity Area (KBA) Partnership. Their aim is to map, monitor and conserve the most important places for life on Earth.

As part of this aim, this October, they launched a brand new website which holds data on over 16,000 KBAs. Each site has information on the location, boundaries and the species and biodiversity for which they are important.

The site features a searchable database and interactive map with at-a-glance summaries, boundary lines and species information.

Areas in Michigan include the Kirtland's Warbler Management Units, Sleeping Bear Dunes National Lakeshore, Saginaw Bay, Waterloo Recreation Area, Barry State Game Area, Yankee Springs Recreation Area, White River in the Manistee National Forest, Allegan State Game area and the Kalamazoo River (from Galesburg to Saugatuck), Eastern Lake St. Clair, the Detroit River and the Fort Custer Recreation Area.

According to their website, The KBA criteria do not just consider populations of species but also their habitats or ecosystems. Ecosystems are identified by the unique collections of species they sustain, so their conservation helps to ensure the simultaneous survival of many species.

However, ecosystems are being rapidly lost and degraded around the world due to human impacts. KBAs can be identified for ecosystems that are globally threatened as defined by the IUCN Red List of Threatened Ecosystems or for ecosystems that are geographically restricted and therefore at risk of being lost due to unsustainable human activity.

There is also a KBA criterion for sites that are fully intact in terms of their fauna and flora, where there is globally outstanding ecological integrity. These sites are becoming increasingly rare around the world as human impacts spread, with only about 26% of the world showing low human impact. Intact sites boast largely unmodified collections of plants as well as retaining their characteristic animal species – unlike many areas of formerly intact forest that appear healthy but their animal population have been depleted by excessive hunting pressures. These intact sites provide disproportionately large climate benefits to people and are the last few areas of true wilderness left on earth.

The new website, keybiodiversityareas.org, provides free access to the World Database of KBAs and offers summaries of each property on the list. The site also explains how people can propose new KBAs and the criteria used to assess them. They can also learn about how KBAs are being used by governments, business, donors and the conservation community.

AUDUBON.ORG INDIGENOUS PEOPLE'S DAY HIGHLIGHT

To celebrate Indigenous People's Day, Audubon Great Lakes Wetland Restoration Manager, Bradford Kasberg, shared a beautiful and informative article celebrating the diversity and resilience of our country's original inhabitants, whose long-overlooked ecological knowledge can help conservation today.

Kasberg is a citizen of the Miami Tribe of Oklahoma and an alum of the Masters of Landscape Architecture program at the University of Michigan. He joined Audubon Great Lakes in 2018.

DNR LAUNCHES WINGED WEDNESDAYS

The Michigan DNR has recently launched a new text alert program called Winged Wednesday.

Subscribers can sign up for a weekly text update on which birds were recently spotted in state parks.

A new bird and park will be highlighted each week. To sign up, text "bird" to 51555 or visit Mobile Cause - app.mobilecause.com/form/LF\_ztA?vid=dcy35

The Michigan DNR has also put together a new Birding page at michigan.gov/dnr!

Click on Things To Do, then Wildlife Viewing. The Wildlife viewing page offers information on Elk Viewing, Birding, Sandhill Crane Migration and the game "What in the Wild".

The new birding site features links to the various birding trails in Michigan including the Sunset Coast Birding Trail, Thornapple, Ausable, Sleeping Bear, Superior, North Huron, Saginaw Bay, Beaver Island and Sunrise Coast Birding Trails.

The new site highlights species such as the Sandhill Crane, provides links to additional birding locations and eBird hotspots and gives resources to help beginners get started birding!

HAVE YOU BEEN "PLIRDING"?

Talkingbirds.com/plirding -

In Sweden a few years ago, a movement called "plogging" sprang up, encouraging runners to pick up trash along their run. Plogging (a combination of Swedish plocka upp — "picking up"— plus "jogging") took off in popularity, and runners around the world now are helping keep trash out of our rivers and oceans by turning every run into a treasure hunt, picking up any trash they find.

Inspired by plogging, "plirding" is picking up trash while birding! As people who enjoy birds, we have an obligation to look after them by taking care of their (and our) environment. Picking up even a couple of pieces of trash while we're out on the trail or in a park can help make a difference. And as others see our example, they might be encouraged to pick up trash too—or perhaps even not throw it on the ground in the first place.

The anthropologist Margaret Mead once said, "Never doubt that a small group of concerned citizens can change the world. Indeed, it is the only thing that ever has." And President John F. Kennedy said, "One person can make a difference, and everyone should try." So let's go plirding!

A quick note in these times of COVID-19: please continue to maintain social distancing while out plirding, and do not pick up anything you do not feel comfortable picking up. The CDC recommends the use of face masks and hand sanitizer, and we think wearing gloves while plirding is always a good idea!

Talkingbirds.com has a great list of ways to get involved and ideas to help you prioritize what to pick up to have the greatest positive impact for birds.

When you go out birding, bring a used plastic grocery bag or netting bag. Adopt your local birding patch and clean it up each time you go out.

If you cannot collect much, prioritize picking up any of the following items -

- Fishing line
- Lead fishing tackle or bullets
- Balloons (inflated or deflated)
- Plastic including shopping bags, straws, six-pack rings, string, etc.

Don't pick up anything you don't feel comfortable picking up; for example, broken glass or syringes. Every item you pick up is one less piece of trash in our waterways and outdoor spaces, so we should all plird in whatever capacity we can!

Visit - Talkingbirds.com/plirding for more information and full details.
